<sup>1</sup> On September 15, 2017, the Civilian Office of Police Accountability replaced the Independent Police Review Authority as the civilian oversight agency of the CPD. Thus, this investigation, which began under IPRA, was transferred to COPA on September 15, 2017, and the recommendation(s) set forth herein are the recommendation(s) of COPA.

<sup>2</sup> COPA's understanding is that on September 23, 2016, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] were in the process of divorce. (See Attachments 11, 21 and 49).

General Order, G04-01: Preliminary Investigations<sup>3</sup>

IV. INVESTIGATION

IRPA and COPA gathered relevant physical and documentary evidence associated with this incident. Additionally, IPRA and COPA obtained statements from [REDACTED] and accused Dets. Struck, Boeddeker and Childs-Laughlin. Material evidence is summarized here:

A. Interview of [REDACTED]

On August 29, 2017, IPRA interviewed [REDACTED] via telephone. Throughout her statement, Ms. [REDACTED] referenced additional incidents separate from her primary allegations. For purposes of this investigation, the following summary is limited to her primary allegations detailed above.

In summary, [REDACTED] stated that on September 23, 2016 she arrived at 5101 S. Wentworth Avenue, the 002nd District, with Paul Meyers and Dr. Roger Spencer<sup>5</sup> to discuss with Det. Struck her complaint against [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] made a complaint in August that when she was in the hospital, [REDACTED] and his brother [REDACTED] had stolen her property out of her home. A year later, [REDACTED] stated that "for some reason, [she] did three Google searches in one day, and [her] stuff is so rare that it's pretty easy to find if you just search for it." She specified that he had taken personal and sentimental items, and that he was attempting to sell her expensive clothing and items. [REDACTED] alleged that "he was fencing it online." Particularly, she alleged that she caught him stealing her "high-end" Gucci and Tom Ford items. She stated that she provided detectives<sup>6</sup> with receipts for the Gucci items; however, she indicated that [REDACTED] had stolen all her other receipts. [REDACTED] asserted that on September 23, 2016, she brought the receipts, <sup>3</sup> General Order Effective Date of October 13, 2015. Latest version became effective October 15, 2017. (Attachment 62).

<sup>4</sup> On the incident date, the staircase where the incident took place did not have cameras. (Attachment 25).

<sup>6</sup> [REDACTED] did not provide the name of the detectives to whom she is referring. (Attachments 11 and 21). Based on COPA's investigation, [REDACTED] most likely is referring to Dets. Struck and Childs-Laughlin. (Attachment 57).

including a receipt for a Gucci purse, to her meeting with Det. Struck. At the end of her interview, she states, "I gave them the receipts, and the white detective<sup>7</sup> he made photocopies of them, and he would say that the ones that had my friend, [REDACTED] name on it, those items didn't belong to me. And I said, 'Look at the date, it was my birthday, it was a birthday present.' And he said, 'well, it has his name on it, so, there.'" She continued to elaborate that it was a birthday present and it was in her possession. Further, she again confirmed that the only receipt that did not have her friend's name on it was the purse that she alleged that [REDACTED] was selling online.

Prior to her meeting with Det. Struck, [REDACTED] stated that she had emailed him screen shots when she found the website on which [REDACTED] allegedly was selling her items. She asserted that Det. Struck "would never answer [her] emails," and that she also sent him the link to the Poshmark<sup>8</sup> account where [REDACTED] was selling her items.<sup>9</sup> However, [REDACTED] stated that when she arrived to speak with Det. Struck on September 23, 2016, [REDACTED] had removed the items from his account.

Before she sat down with Det. Struck, Det. Boeddeker walked up to her and said to her something to the effect of "[REDACTED] comes in every day to make a complaint about her, that they're sick of it, and that one of them is going to jail." Subsequently, Dets. Struck, Boeddeker and Childs-Laughlin<sup>10</sup> took her to a white room around the corner, told her they wanted to ask her more questions and Mirandized her. [REDACTED] stated that Det. Boeddeker told her they needed her to log into her Poshmark account to see [REDACTED] Poshmark page. [REDACTED] stated that during this Det. Struck told her, "we know he's fencing your property online." Once [REDACTED] logged in and showed the detectives [REDACTED] page, she told the detectives that the items were no longer up on the site, including the Gucci purse, but that his page revealed that the last item sold was from Tom Ford. Det. Boeddeker then began going through her Poshmark account and printing documents. Afterwards, Det. Boeddeker took her to another room and began showing her documents printed from Facebook. During this interaction, she asked Det. Boeddeker to give her car keys to Dr. Spencer. In response, she stated that he said to her, "if you admit to all of these things, then I'll give him the keys." [REDACTED] told him, "that's entrapment, I'm not going to admit to anything that I didn't do, just to give him the keys. That's crazy." [REDACTED] indicated that she was then moved to a cell.

Later, Dets. Boeddeker and Childs-Laughlin returned for her and led her to a staircase. She indicated that Det. Boeddeker walked first down the stairs, then her, and finally, Det. Childs-Laughlin. When she was about three steps down the staircase, characterized by [REDACTED] as steep and either granite or terrazzo, Det. Childs-Laughlin pushed her from behind causing her to fall forward. She stated that her head went down and hit the wall, she tumbled down the stairs and landed on her back in the middle of the staircase. She said she was screaming in pain, her head was pointing down, her arms were at her side and her feet were up. [REDACTED] stated that she hit the left side of her head into the corner of the staircase. After she fell down the stairs, Det.

<sup>9</sup> [REDACTED] forwarded to COPA emails that she had sent to Det. Struck. The emails are discussed herewith. (Attachment 61).

<sup>10</sup> In her statement, [REDACTED] identified her as a big black woman and very tall. COPA identified Det. Childs-Laughlin from pertinent CPD reports. (Attachments 11, 14, 15 and 21).

Boeddeker grabbed her wrists while Det. Childs-Laughlin grabbed her ankles, and together began dragging her down the staircase. At this point, [REDACTED] back was to the staircase. She stated that she screamed the entire time. She next remembered the fire department arriving and taking her to the hospital. [REDACTED] stated that her injuries were bruising on her head, her back, her arms, her legs and "everywhere."<sup>11</sup> (Attachments 11 and 21).

B. Interview of Accused Det. Joseph Struck

On December 20, 2017, COPA interviewed Det. Struck, the assigned Det. to RD# HY425539. In summary, Det. Struck stated that upon being assigned the case he would have pulled available case files. He believes he next spoke to [REDACTED] on the phone at which point she discussed that [REDACTED] was selling her items on a website. Det. Struck communicated to [REDACTED] that they would need to meet in person, and she would need to bring all her evidence, and prove that she owned the items. Ultimately, they met on September 23, 2016.

On September 23, 2016, to the best of Det. Struck's recollection, he interviewed [REDACTED] but she did not provide receipts or evidence that she owned the items.<sup>12</sup> [REDACTED] showed Det. Struck a website in which she indicated he was selling the items, but the website had been closed or the items had been taken down. During Det. Struck's interview with [REDACTED] Det. Boeddeker recognized [REDACTED] from an investigative alert that he had issued for her, resulting in two investigations and pulled Det. Struck aside to inform him of such. Det. Struck believes that at that point, [REDACTED] was going to attempt to determine if she had registered the items, as they were "high-end" items, as well as generally obtain more evidence. Det. Struck stated that more evidence was needed to pursue the investigation, specifically to show that she owned the items or she ever had the items to demonstrate that he wasn't just selling random items on the internet. Det. Struck indicated this was how their investigation ended.

Det. Struck stated that the investigation was closed because the only evidence he had or was given in furtherance of [REDACTED] complaint was her story. He summarized that 1) he had no corroborating evidence, 2) no documentation that she owned the items that she alleged [REDACTED] had taken and was selling, 3) he had an initial report that [REDACTED] had thrown out non-related items, and 4) no witnesses. (Attachments 13, 23, 36).

C. Interview of Accused Det. Bryan Boeddeker

On January 4, 2018, COPA interviewed Det. Boeddeker. In summary, Det. Boeddeker stated that as part of his investigation into RD# HZ401208, he reviewed [REDACTED] background, including prior arrests and convictions. In doing so, he reviewed RD# HZ257890 leading him to discover an active investigative alert for [REDACTED] issued by Det. Sergio Velazquez.

On September 23, 2016, Det. Boeddeker personally interacted with [REDACTED] for the first time. On that date, he observed [REDACTED] in the Area Central office at the 002 District station speaking with Det. Childs-Laughlin. Recognizing [REDACTED] from his investigative alert, issued the previous month, Det. Boeddeker pulled Det. Struck aside and informed him of such. Through their conversation, he discovered that [REDACTED] had made a report against [REDACTED] the victim in his case RD# HZ401208. He informed Det. Struck that [REDACTED] had an order of protection against [REDACTED] which she had been served. At some point, Dets. Boeddeker, Struck and Childs-Laughlin went into a room where Det. Boeddeker mirandized [REDACTED] and discussed the incident respective to his investigation.

<sup>11</sup> In [REDACTED] booking photograph, as observed more largely in the CPD Prisoner Transportation Transmittal no obvious bruising or injury is perceptible. (Attachment 39).

<sup>12</sup> In Det. Childs-Laughlin's interviews, she recalled [REDACTED] providing receipts on September 23, 2016. Attorney Kelly Krauchun provided those receipts via email on January 10, 2018.

Ultimately, the decision was made to arrest [REDACTED]. After placing [REDACTED] in a secured room, Det. Boeddeker informed her he would be right back, and that he needed to get a female to search her. Referring to his Detective Supplementary Report, Attachment 44, Dets. Boeddeker and Childs-Laughlin conducted an interview of [REDACTED] regarding RD# HZ257890. Det. Boeddeker recalled [REDACTED] "seeming fine" during the interview. Detective Boeddeker denied [REDACTED] allegation that he attempted to coerce her into admitting to criminal allegations in exchange for transporting her keys to a companion.

Detective Boeddeker eventually relocated [REDACTED] to lock-up and sought Det. Childs-Laughlin to walk [REDACTED] with him to lock-up. Expressly, based on everything that had transpired, which included some erratic behavior not discussed in this report to respect [REDACTED] privacy interests, Detective Boeddeker stated that he wanted a female witness. To get to the lock-up, Det. Boeddeker stated that one must walk down a staircase from the second floor to the first floor. The door to lock-up is immediately adjacent to the left of the staircase. Det. Boeddeker stated they walked down single file with Det. Childs-Laughlin first, [REDACTED] second and him third. Det. Boeddeker described the staircase as having a break or landing in the middle prior to it reaching the floor. Det. Boeddeker did not recall if [REDACTED] was handcuffed when walking down the stairs.

As they neared the landing area, Det. Boeddeker observed [REDACTED] bend her knees and throw her weight or body forward into Det. Childs-Laughlin, and proceed to continue going down to the ground. Det. Boeddeker stated that [REDACTED] actions looked intentional and not that she had tripped. As [REDACTED] went down to the ground, she was turning her body such that her back was to the ground, her head was towards Det. Childs-Laughlin and her feet were towards Det. Boeddeker. In addition, as [REDACTED] was going down, she struck Det. Childs-Laughlin who then turned her body back towards [REDACTED] to attempt to cradle her or perform a "slow motion controlled fall." [REDACTED] ended up laying down on her back on the stairs just above the landing area in the middle of the staircase. Subsequently, Det. Boeddeker observed her yell loudly, "ow, ow, ow," and push with her feet her body further down the steps, while continuing to yell "ow, ow, ow." Det. Boeddeker believed, but was not certain, that at this point he grabbed a part of her leg to stop her from falling further. Det. Boeddeker described Det. Childs-Laughlin's actions on the staircase as preventing [REDACTED] from hurting herself. He described [REDACTED] as on top of Det. Childs-Laughlin and it appearing as if [REDACTED] was or was going to attempt to push past her. Det. Boeddeker believed [REDACTED] struck into Det. Childs-Laughlin before yelling "ow, ow, ow." Ultimately, she came to rest on the staircase's middle landing area.

Det. Boeddeker denied grabbing [REDACTED] by her wrists or dragging her down the stairs. If he had grabbed [REDACTED] it would have been her lower body as her feet were by him. He also denied Det. Childs-Laughlin dragging [REDACTED] down the stairs. Regarding [REDACTED] allegation that Det. Childs-Laughlin grabbed her ankles, Det. Boeddeker stated again that [REDACTED] head was by Det. Childs-Laughlin. Prior to [REDACTED] coming to a stop on the landing, [REDACTED] upper body made contact with Det. Childs-Laughlin's upper body, and her buttocks and her back then made contact with the stairs as she pushed herself down the stairs.

Det. Boeddeker made the decision to leave [REDACTED] be, and not touch or move her further, and for Det. Childs-Laughlin to call an ambulance. He remembered [REDACTED] did not get back to her feet after coming to rest on the landing. At that time, he did not see any visible injuries on [REDACTED]. Det. Boeddeker iterated that his main goal at the time was to prevent [REDACTED] from pushing herself down the stairs again or hurting herself further. Det. Boeddeker recalls the Chicago Fire Department ("CFD") retrieved [REDACTED] from the steps. His interaction with [REDACTED] concluded here. (Attachment 47).

D. Interview of Accused Det. Pamela Childs-Laughlin

On January 8, 2018, COPA interviewed Det. Childs-Laughlin. Det. Childs-Laughlin gave substantially the same account of the incident as Det. Boeddeker. Referring to the fall on the stairs, Det. Boeddeker stated that she walked in front of [REDACTED] while Det. Boeddeker walked behind [REDACTED]. As they walked down the staircase, Det. Childs-Laughlin felt [REDACTED] fall into her causing her to stumble down the stairs. Simultaneously, Det. Childs-Laughlin turned her body around to see what was occurring. When she turned around, she observed [REDACTED] twist her body such that [REDACTED] back was in front of her. She stated that all she could do was "break her [REDACTED] from falling." As this occurred, she attempted to balance both herself and [REDACTED]. Det. Childs-Laughlin indicated that at most her knee hit the staircase, but she did not fall entirely down. She stated that she braced [REDACTED] head as [REDACTED] reached the floor. At this point, Det. Childs-Laughlin stated her body was underneath [REDACTED] body. After extricating herself from underneath [REDACTED] body, she told Det. Boeddeker, paraphrasing, to grab [REDACTED] ankles and stop her from coming down. Det. Boeddeker responded that he couldn't because [REDACTED] was "pushing." She remembered seeing [REDACTED] hands and described [REDACTED] as not attempting to stop herself. Additionally, it seemed to Det. Childs-Laughlin that [REDACTED] was pushing herself down the stairs, such that she felt [REDACTED] weight being pushed against her.

Once [REDACTED] reached the landing in the middle of the staircase, she came to a stop. At first, Det. Childs-Laughlin thought [REDACTED] had fainted, but her eyes were open. After securing [REDACTED] she stated that neither her nor Det. Boeddeker let her move from the staircase. The incident concluded with [REDACTED] going to the hospital. Det. Childs-Laughlin did not have further contact with [REDACTED]. Detective Childs-Laughlin denied all of the allegations against her. (Attachment 55).

E. CPD Reports

COPA received and reviewed many Reports relative to this incident. These reports provided documentation of the involved Department members' narrative of events. All reports are available on CLEAR.

F. CFD Emergency Management Services (“EMS”) Report

CFD’s EMS report indicate that they found [REDACTED] alert and oriented, and complaining of left leg pain. It continues to state, “per patient she injured herself falling down,” and she “denies loss of consciousness.” Under physical impression, it states “no trauma” and “leg pain.” (Attachment 9).

G. [REDACTED] Medical Records

H. IOD Report for Det. Childs-Laughlin

In summary, Det. Childs-Laughlin’s IOD report details that on September 23, 2016 she and Det. Boeddeker were escorting [REDACTED] to the 002 District’s lock up on the lower level when she “appeared to lose her footing falling into Det. Childs[Laughlin]’s right shoulder.” (Attachment 56).

I. Emails from [REDACTED] to Det. Struck

Upon COPA’s request, [REDACTED] forwarded emails to COPA that she sent to Det. Struck. In addition, she forwarded screenshots to COPA that she asserted she also sent to Det. Struck. In the forwarded emails provided by email, no response is shown from Det. Struck. Additionally, [REDACTED] provided no emails received from Det. Struck. In his statement, Det. Struck did not recall if email correspondence had been exchanged between him and [REDACTED] (Attachments 41 and 61).

J. Receipts forwarded by Det. Childs-Laughlin and [REDACTED]

In Det. Childs-Laughlin’s statement to COPA, she recalled that [REDACTED] had provided receipts on September 23, 2016. Copies of three receipts from Gucci, one in New York and one in Chicago, were forwarded to COPA by Attorney Kelly Krauchun on Det. Childs-Laughlin’s behalf. Two of the receipts are faded and difficult to read. Regarding the items sold, only “handbags,” “shoe,” and “sunglasses” are legible. (Attachment 56).

██████████ also provided via email receipts from Gucci. The receipts are identical to those provided by Det. Childs-Laughlin. Like those the emails, they are not entirely legible. (Attachment 65).

V. ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Accused Det. Struck<sup>13</sup>

The prevailing General Order: G04-01, titled “Preliminary Investigations” dictates that “members conducting a preliminary investigation will conduct a thorough and accurate investigation.” It does not discuss what “thorough and accurate” entails. In the instant case, it is notable that ██████████ complaint is not closed, but rather classified as suspended pending any new investigative leads.<sup>14</sup> Thus, one may view it premature to assign a final determination as to whether Det. Struck’s investigation was “thorough and accurate.”

When Det. Struck last requested a suspended case status on October 24, 2016, the evidence he had been provided were screenshots of ██████████ selling items that ██████████ claimed were hers, nondescript Gucci receipts, and a witness with no firsthand knowledge of the alleged theft. Despite ██████████ efforts, and outside of her own statements, she had not provided sufficient evidence of ownership of the items that she alleged ██████████ had taken and was fraudulently selling, e.g., photographs of her wearing the items or witnesses affirming personal knowledge of her owning the items. Reviewing the evidence in Det. Struck’s possession in its entirety, and considering the lack of direction or insight by the prevailing General Order as to what constitutes a “thorough and accurate investigation,” the preponderance of the evidence does not support ██████████ allegation that Det. Struck failed to conduct a thorough investigation into her complaint against ██████████. Therefore, COPA recommends a finding of UNFOUNDED on the allegation against Det. Struck.

Allegations Against Det. Childs-Laughlin and Det. Boeddeker Relative to the Staircase

Applying COPA’s preponderance of the evidence standard, it is more likely than not that ██████████ interaction with Det. Childs-Laughlin and Det. Boeddeker on the staircase did not occur in the manner ██████████ alleged. Both Det. Childs-Laughlin’s and Det. Boeddeker’s statements to COPA combined with Det. Boeddeker’s authored CPD reports documenting the interaction are determined to be more credible than ██████████ recitation of the incident. Additionally, ██████████ herself stated herself in the EMS and medical reports that she fell, and does not assert malfeasance on the part of the detectives. It is striking that initial notes from the <sup>13</sup> Near the conclusion of COPA’s investigation into ██████████ allegation against Det. Struck, it was discovered that on October 30, 2017, ██████████ had for a second time made a complaint against Det. Struck for failure to conduct a thorough investigation into her complaint that “her stolen property is being sold on the internet.” Independent of the instant investigation, ██████████ complaint was forwarded by COPA to CPD’s Bureau of Internal Affairs (“BIA”), Unit 121, under Log #1087315. On December 19, 2017, BIA administratively closed the case. Regarding the administratively closed status, comments on CLEAR by Sgt. Shawn Pickett, Unit 121, state that “the accused Detective reported on case supp report under HY425539 that the complainant had no serial numbers or website picture of the property, that was not listed on original case. Case is suspended pending new leads.” COPA’s recommendation is made independent of CPD’s investigation and findings. (Attachment 59).

<sup>14</sup> Per the Detective Training Section/Investigative Development Group of CPD’s Education and Training Division, a request to suspend a case requires approval by a supervisor. All of Det. Struck’s supplementary reports received approval from a supervisor.

CIVILIAN OFFICE OF POLICE ACCOUNTABILITY
LOG #1086020

Emergency Room Attending described [REDACTED] as “uncooperative and demonstrating very manipulative behavior.” In addition, the medical records notated no trauma to her head and no significant trauma to her extremities, which “run counter” to what might be expected if one were dragged down a hard, marble staircase.

Accordingly, COPA recommends a finding of UNFOUNDED on the allegation that Det. Childs-Laughlin pushed [REDACTED] from behind while walking her down a staircase on the way to the 002 District female lock-up causing her to fall down the stairs.

Likewise, COPA recommends a finding of UNFOUNDED on the allegation that after [REDACTED] fell down the stairs, Det. Childs-Laughlin grabbed her by her ankles and together with Det. Boeddeker dragged her down the rest of the staircase for the reasons delineated under the prior allegation.

Finally, COPA recommends a finding of UNFOUNDED on the allegation that Det. Boeddeker grabbed [REDACTED] by the wrists and together with Det. Childs-Laughlin dragged her down a staircase on the way to the 002 District female lock-up.

Remaining Allegation Against Accused Det. Boeddeker

COPA recommends a finding of UNFOUNDED on the allegation that Det. Boeddeker attempted to coerce [REDACTED] into admitting to criminal allegations in exchange for transporting her keys to a companion. COPA finds Det. Boeddeker credible, and based on the credibility determination discussed above, it is more likely than not that Det. Boeddeker did not engage in this alleged conduct.
